U.S. Religious Zionists To Seek $2 Million For Israel Projects

The Religious Zionists of America will conduct a campaign for $2,000,000 to support religious and educational institutions and other projects in Israel. The Rev. Dr. Bernard Bergman, president of the organization, announced at a press conference, in New York, that the drive would open at the group's annual convention in Atlantic City in October.

It will be the first independent effort by a Zionist group since the Jewish Agency for Israel, Inc., announced in April that it would discontinue in December allocating funds to the Zionist groups in Israel, reports the New York Times. The agency's new policy is for general rather than specific apportioning of its funds.

The Jewish Agency, the major beneficiary of the United Jewish Appeal campaigns, has for a number of years distributed $2,000,000 annually to five Zionist groups. The funds had been used, the agency said, by those bodies for varied humanitarian programs among newcomers to Israel. The Religious Zionists received $750,000 annually from the agency.

Rabbi Bergman said the money to be raised would be used for agricultural settlements; religious, cultural, and educational institutions; interest-free loan agencies; and social welfare needs for newly arrived immigrants. He said the campaign would be conducted under the head of the "Religious Israel Appeal."

He emphasized, however, that the "United Jewish Appeal is still the main source of revenue for Israel and should continue to receive the support of the Jewish community at large. The world looks to Israel for religious revival and creativeness," he said, adding that the "religious development of Israel cannot be left to fund-raising agencies or any other secular bodies."

"It has been," Rabbi Bergman continued, "the responsibility of the Religious Zionists since its inception in 1905 to engage in a

Parents Urge End To Religious Customs In Miami Schools

A broadside attack on the constitutionality of religious practices in the public schools took place recently in a Miami, Florida, court room. Chief counsel for plaintiffs and defendants declared in interviews that they intended to take the case to the United States Supreme Court for a decision.

Five parents — three Jewish, one Unitarian, and one agnostic — brought the action, says the New York Times. They asked the court for an injunction to force the Dade County Board of Public Instruction to discontinue reading the Bible, recitation of the Lord's Prayer, observance of religious holidays, and other religious practices in its schools. They contend these practices violate the religious liberty clauses of the Florida and the United States Constitutions.

"I objected to certain religious practices in the schools which I did not approve of," Harlow Chamberlin, the agnostic, testified as first witness for the plaintiffs. "They are a violation of the separation of church and state and my own religious conscience. I am not going to be a taxpayer required to afford funds to send my children to a private school when public schools are available."

Mr. Chamberlin is the plaintiff in one of two companion cases being tried in the Dade County Circuit Court before Judge J. Frits Gordon, says the New York Times. His case is being supported by the Florida Civil Liberties Union; and the case of the four parents by the American Jewish Congress.

A major point at issue is whether the children of the plaintiffs are being compelled either directly or through psychological pressures, to take part in religious observances to which their parents object. If the plaintiffs were to be successful in an ultimate appeal, the result would be to strike out all references to religion in the program of the nation's public schools.

The suit has aroused many Protestant churchgoers in the Miami area to support a crusade to preserve the religious practices required or permitted in the classrooms. Florida now requires the reading of the Bible and the recitation of the Lord's Prayers, both without the accompaniment of sectarian comment.

A number of Miami, Florida, Protestant churches recently held prayer services for the success of the school board's defense of its practices. A crowd of 200 churchgoers, mostly women, pressed to get into the air-conditioned courtroom for the opening of the trial. Several carried signs saying, "Keep God in the Schools."

The doors had to be closed after about 100 of them were admitted, and most of those who were kept out stayed in the corridor to testify to their beliefs before television cameras, says the New York Times. Judge Gordon cautioned attorneys and spectators to remember that "this is not a show." He said that no theatrical demonstrations or signs would be permitted in the court.

"This case is of vital importance to all the parties involved," the judge said, "and must be decided strictly as to matters of law."

Donald C. Swanson, executive director of the Greater Miami Council of Churches, heads a group of nine church leaders who have intervened on the School Board's side. He has appealed to churches and their members to contribute funds to help his citizens committee to take the case to the Supreme Court.

"Some church people consider this an attack on religion per se, or an attack of the minority on the majority in the courts," Mr. Swanson said in an interview. "The intervenors do not say it's

Major U. S. Jewish Groups Ask Highest Court Ban Sunday Laws

Several major American Jewish religious and civic groups have sent a brief to the United States Supreme Court requesting a declaration that compulsory Sunday laws were unconstitutional. The plea was jointly presented by two national Jewish coordinating agencies, the Synagogue Council of America, and the National Community Relations Advisory Council.

The Synagogue Council represented the rabbinic and congregational arms of the three branches of Judaism, Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform, and the other body embraces several major Jewish civic groups and fifty-two Jewish councils in cities throughout the United States.

The brief, signed by Leo Pfeffer, associate general counsel of the American Jewish Congress, argued that Sunday laws infringed on the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution, says the New York Times.

The First Amendment prohibits any establishment of religion or any law prohibiting the free exercise of religion. The Fourteenth enjoins states from depriving persons of liberty or property without due process of law or from denying them equal protection of the laws.

The brief specifically challenged the compulsory Sunday laws of Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. In both those states, Sabbath-observing Jews have sought in lower courts to enjoin enforcement of the laws against them. The cases are on appeal in the Supreme Court.

Major Jewish religious and civic groups have frequently charged that Sabbath laws were religious legislation, and have called for drastic revision of the laws to enable those who observe the Sabbath on Saturday, in particular the Jews, to operate places of business on Sunday.

Two years ago, the New York Legislature defeated a bill that would have enabled Jewish merchants to operate on Sunday. Preliminary legislation had been passed by the New York City Council forcing a vote in the State Legislature.

The brief sent to the Supreme Court contended that the Sunday laws infringe the First Amendment because they were religious laws, forbidden by the constitutional ban on the establishment of religion.

Still further, the brief argued that even if they were considered welfare laws, as has been argued, they still "infringe the amendment because they restrain the religious freedom of persons who observe some day other than Sunday as their Sabbath and thus interfere with the free exercise of religion."

In contending that the Sunday laws also infringed the Fourteenth Amendment, says the New York Times, the brief rested on the "so-called 'due process' clause." The laws, the brief held, "arbitrarily and unreasonably permit some activities and forbid others."

"Thus," the brief continued, "the effect deprives individuals of liberty and property without due process of law and denies equal protection of the laws."

The brief deplored what it said were recent attempts to interpret these laws as welfare measures, intended to ensure at least one day of rest in seven. The brief noted the following:

"The Massachusetts law still designates the day on which certain activities are forbidden not as Sunday, but as 'the Lord's Day.'

"Both the Massachusetts and Pennsylvania laws permit sports events after 1 or 2 P.M. on Sunday. This limitation is designed to 'avoid competition with church services.'

"The Sunday laws do not in fact require anyone to rest on Sunday. They merely forbid certain trades, businesses and occupations from being pursued on that day."

"A law concerned with health and welfare would not necessarily designate 'the Lord's Day' as the required day of rest. This is shown by the fact that both Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, as well as other states, have separate laws regulating the number of days and hours that persons may work in any one week."

Engineer Was Renowned As Great Bridge Designer Of 20th Century

Dr. David Barnard Steinman, seventy-three, one of the most renowned American bridge designers of the twentieth century, who died at his home, 305 Riverside Drive, New York, was the winner of a score of professional medals and prizes, designed more than 400 bridges throughout the world during his fifty-year career, says the New York Herald Tribune. From 1948 to 1954 he was also in charge of reconstructing the Brooklyn Bridge, which he considered the most beautiful structure in the world.

Dr. Steinman once wrote:

"We live with the structures we build. Our works become part of the landscape, to mar or to grace. If we are to be true to our trust, each structure we raise and each span we build must be a thing of inspiration.

"No one, unless he is completely without feeling, can remain unmoved at the sight of a beautiful bridge. A bridge is more than a thing of steel and stone; it is the fulfillment of human dreams to link together distant places."

The places Dr. Steinman most recently joined together were the upper and lower peninsulas of Michigan, separated by the five-mile Straits of Mackinac. The Mackinac Bridge, longest in the world from one cable anchorage to the other, is painted a foliage green, with off-white towers.

. . . "I got tired of seeing bridges painted black or battleship gray," he explained later, says the New York Herald Tribune. "I thought bridges should have a little warmth, something to tie them in with their settings." In the New York area, Dr. Steinman designed the Henry Hudson Bridge over the Harlem River and was associated in designing the Triborough Bridge, which links Manhattan, the Bronx, and Queens.

His other achievements include the Thousand Islands international bridges over the St. Lawrence River; a suspension span at Florianopolis, Brazil, the largest bridge in South America; the Carquinez Strait Bridge in California, the longest cantilever span in the United States; the Charter Oak Bridge at Hartford, Conn., across the Connecticut River; and many more.

He also assisted Gustav Lindenthal in the design of the Hell Gate Arch Bridge, a railway span connecting Queens with the Bronx. At his death Dr. Steinman was still active as senior member of the firm of Steinman, Boynton, Gronquist, and London, consulting engineers at 117 Liberty Street, New York City.

He was born on Manhattan's Lower East Side. He was graduated summa cum laude from the College of the City of New York in 1905. He received degrees as a civil engineer and a Master of Arts in 1909 from Columbia, and earned his doctorate there in 1911.

He also held nineteen honorary degrees from universities in Belgium, France, India, Italy, and the United States, says the New York Herald Tribune. Dr. Steinman taught engineering at the University of Idaho from 1910 to 1914 and was professor in charge of civil and mechanical engineering at C. C. N. Y. from 1917 to 1920. He was in consulting practice since that time.

The marriage of Miss Esther Feldman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Feldman, 4100 Bouchette Avenue, to Armand Cymbalista, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cymbalista, 6365 Mountain Sights Avenue, took place on Thursday, August 4, at half-past-six o'clock, at Beth El Synagogue. Rabbi Solomon Frank officiated, assisted by Cantor Max Muhlstock. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She was attired in a gown of white silk organza, appliqued with rosettes, which had short sleeves; scooped neckline; fitted bodice; and full skirt. Her waist-length veil of tulle illusion was attached to a crown of seed-pearl-beads and rhinestones; and she carried a prayer book with white and mauve orchids. Mrs. Saul Orenbach, sister of the bride, as matron of honour, wore a white organza gown, re-embroidered with pastel stitching. She had a rhinestone tiara; and carried pink and white carnations. Susan Orenbach and Marla Reicher, nieces of the groom, as flower girls, were dressed in powder-blue nylon, with bouffant skirts; and had pink and blue bandeaux. Tom Zemmel was best man for his brother. Standards of pink, white, and blue carnations decorated the synagogue and hall. Mrs. Feldman, mother of the bride, wore a powder-blue lace gown, draped with chiffon, which had short sleeves; and a square neckline; also a matching hat. Mrs. Cymbalista, mother of the groom, wore a gown of pale blue lace and organza, cut with a fitted bodice; skirt bouffant in the back; and had a matching hat. Their corsages were of mauve and white orchids. Mrs. Michael Feldman, grandmother of the bride, 4411 City Hall Avenue, walked down the aisle in a champagne-coloured sheath gown; with short sleeves; and a square neckline; and had a hat of that color. Mr. and Mrs. Armand Cymbalista spent their wedding trip in Nassau and Jamaica. They have taken up residence at 4660 Plamondon Avenue. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. I. MAZEL TOV made from sweet Concord grapes by the most famous name in Canadian winemaking!

Years of planning It took more than three years, after the decision was taken to introduce a kosher wine, before the first beautiful decanter of "Mazel Tov" was placed on the market. The strict details of Kashruth had to be arranged with the rabbis, and elaborate testing and research undertaken. From all this came "Mazel Tov"—a wine we are proud to offer from coast to coast in Canada.

Delicious "heimish" flavour This sweet rich wine in its beautiful decanter bottle recaptures the taste you used to know. It is the wine you sipped at the Pesach seders, the wine beside the candles at the Sabbath meal, the wine you made Kiddush with at Yom Tov, and the wine with which you toasted "L'chayim" at every simcha. "Mazel Tov" is a wine you'll "remember" with pleasure as you drink it. It's a wine that says "Mazel Tov" on your lips, as in the glass.

Available now! In Quebec, "Mazel Tov" is on sale at most QLC stores. In Ontario, "Mazel Tov" is available at LCBO stores, and at any of Bright's retail wine stores.

In the Toronto metropolitan area, for free delivery of three bottles or more, phone LE 4-7557.

● BARON DE HIRSCH INSTITUTE ●

of the Federation of Jewish Community Services, announces a new facility for greater assistance to the aged in a coordinated program of services to elderly Jewish persons through consultation, referral, and information for themselves and their families. Max Pascal is president of the Institute. Edward Barkoff is Federation president. The Institute is supported by the annual campaign of the Combined Jewish Appeal. Sam. Fogel, a senior member of the Baron de Hirsch Family Welfare staff, has been appointed in charge and will work under the supervision of David Weiss, executive director of the Institute. Mr. Fogel is a graduate social worker with a Master of Social Work degree and has been with the Institute for the past six years. The new services to the aged are the result of several years of study conducted by the Council on Jewish Aging; and the chairman is Mrs. M. E. Coshof. The Institute is one of the affiliated agencies. The non-institutional services for the aged were recommended to promote better adjustment of growing numbers of aged persons in the community-at-large; to help to decrease the demand for institutional facilities; and to serve as a preventive measure against undue and premature deterioration of the aging individual. The total number of Jewish individuals aged 65 years and over in metropolitan Montreal had more than doubled in the 15 years between 1941 and 1956, their number having grown from approximately 3,000 to 6,200. By 1981 the estimated number of individuals in this age group will probably reach 12,200. David Weiss said: "Another significant statistical figure emphasizing the need for non-institutional services to the aged is the fact that at the present time only five percent of elderly persons are actually institutionalized. In the Montreal Jewish Home for Aged, for example, the present average age of the residents is 82 years. Today the problems of aging are universal. They affect all people in the same way without regard to status or means." Call Mr. Fogel now for consultation at the offices of the Institute, 493 Sherbrooke St. West; Victor 4-8621.

Thirteen Quebec Students Receive B. of M. Scholarships

Nine boys and four girls who have won first-year Bank of Montreal Canada Centennial Scholarships for the Province of Quebec as announced by the bank, are among 60 boys and girls across Canada who are to receive $750 for first-year university study, either in arts or sciences. They are: Claude Abraham, aged 17 years, of Montreal; Gilles Beaudry, 18, of Three Rivers; Elaine Carducci, 15; Rejean Daigneault, 18; Thomas H. Goldberg, 16; Serge Laplante, 16; Gary Luxton, 17; all of Montreal; Sandra J. MacLean, 16, Strathmore; Mark S. Mandelcorn, 16; Dorothy J. Milne, 16; Noel Paul Roy, 16; Ralph C. Walker, 15, all of Montreal; Monique St. Georges, 17, of Joliette.

The winning Quebec students were among 657 boys and girls in this province who applied, all of them top-ranking 1960 graduates of their respective high schools. Across Canada, 2,208 students applied, and each application had to be accompanied by the recommendation of the student's principal, so that there was considerable "pre-selection" in the schools. Winners were decided upon within the last week by provincial selection committees composed of leading educationalists in the provinces concerned. The 60 awards of $750 now announced are the first step in a seven-year plan announced by the B. of M. last May to provide bank-aided university study.

The program will culminate in 1967, the year of the centennial of Canadian Confederation and the bank's 150th anniversary, when two final Canada Centennial awards will be made. One award will be in arts and one in science, each in the amount of $6,000 for study anywhere in the world. The scheme provides for a total of 124 awards in the years 1960-67, ranging from $750 to $5,000. When the plan was announced, G. Arnold Hart, president of the B. of M., said the bank hoped the scholarships would provide "a tangible and worthwhile observance of the national centennial to the future national advantage."

He stressed that his organization "has never used U. J. A. allocations to support political work in Israel." Last year, Rabbi Bergman said, his organization raised $500,000 from its own membership to support varied projects in Israel.

Officials of the General Zionists indicated shortly after the Jewish Agency's announcement that it also might embark on an independent campaign, says the New York Times. It is expected that the others might follow the same course when the allocations cease at the end of this year.

PARENTS URGE END TO RELIGIOUS CUSTOMS

an attack on religion. But we feel the law should be upheld on the reading of the Bible and the Lord's Prayer."

The plaintiffs go beyond an assault on these two practices, and ask for an end to a number of others that they contend are common in Dade county's schools. These allegations include:

The saying of other sectarian prayers and grace. Observance of religious holidays, including Christmas, Easter, and Chanukah, the Jewish holiday at mid-year. Religious displays and symbols in the schools. Questioning of children on their religious affiliation. Baccalaureate programs. A religious test for teachers, specifically a question on the employment application that asks, "Do you believe in God?"

As testimony began, Mr. Chamberlin was asked why, if he did not want his child exposed to the religious practices in the schools, he had not asked to have his child excused from participating, says the New York Times.

The School Board said that this request is always granted.

"I concluded not to keep my son from school," Mr. Chamberlin replied, "because it would make him stand apart, and make him subject to persecution by his school mates."

Mrs. Elsie Thorner, a Unitarian, told the court that she objected to the instruction of her two children in the dogma of the Nativity and the resurrection. This instruction comes about, she indicated, chiefly from plays and programs at Christmas and Easter.

Miss Catherine Moore, a Miami high school principal, testified that all students were required to attend the Christmas assembly. But they would be excused if their parents so requested, she added, says the New York Times. Edward Resnick and Dr. Philip Stern, the other plaintiffs, also testified to their objections to religious practices provided or permitted by Florida law.

The Centenary Of Argentinian Jewry

BY DR. SAUL SOKAL, OF THE RESEARCH STAFF OF THE WORLD JEWISH CONGRESS INSTITUTE OF JEWISH AFFAIRS, IN NEW YORK

The Jews of Argentina have just chalked up their first century and, both in Buenos Aires and provincial cities, there is a round of celebrations. Though youthful in comparison with some of the other great communities of Jewry, Argentina's is a showplace for unified action and for a richness of Jewish life that, as may be expected, is reflected in the community-wide centenary festivities. Just as the 20th century chalutzim pioneers of Israel contributed so much to the shaping of modern Israel, the handful of 19th century Jewish agricultural settlers of Argentina were responsible for laying the Jewish groundwork on which the present community of 400,000 has flourished.

Argentinian Jews set 1860 as their founding date because that was the first time official records registered a Jewish event, a wedding. Until about 1889, the community numbered little more than 1,000 or 1,500, mainly Jews of European origin. The year 1889 was the turning point. That August, 136 Russian Jewish families, comprising 824 persons, landed from the SS. Weser. The Kamenetzers, as the newcomers were called, travelled hundreds of miles overland and set up colonies in the vicinity of Moisesville. For two years they fought poverty, hardship, sickness, until their plight came to the attention of Baron de Hirsch and his Jewish Colonization Association. In 1891 de Hirsch rallied to their support.

At the beginning of the 20th century, the Jewish colonists established the first agricultural co-operatives which were cited by the Argentinian Government as models for all the nation's farmers. The colonies continued for years the old, rich, and pithy life of East European Jewry. By 1919, they had sponsored about 60 schools with 200 teachers for about 4,000 children. The customs of the villages were Jewish, their language Yiddish, and this heritage was transmitted to the towns as sons and daughters of the colonists went to study, or to work away from home.

Due to the drift from the village to the city, the population in the colonies and their urban extensions, the Argentinian-type "shtetls", (towns) have diminished from about 28,000 to 10,000-12,000 today, and the number of actual farmers from 3,500 at peak to less than 2,000. But this change has not detracted from the colonies' role in building up the entire community, in forming its character, bequeathing cultural values and feeding literally home-grown, full-blooded Jewish leaders and communal workers to the cities.

With immigrants coming into the country in considerable numbers, the community totalled 100,000 by 1914 and, after World War I, immigration continued, allowing large groups of Jews, also mostly East European, to swell the community's ranks. That Argentine continues to be a country receptive to newcomers was emphasized as recently as a few weeks ago by President Arturo Frondizi when he received Dr. Nahum Goldmann, the President of the World Jewish Congress, for a long talk about Jewish and Israeli affairs.

Numerically, the Jews in the cities fast outpaced the colonies. Many of the city immigrants started out as peddlers, or quentniks, whose ingenuity, in the supply-scarce markets after World War I, resulted in the organization of a purchasing co-operative. This meant that the errant peddler settled down as co-owner of a department store with a multi-million peso turnover. There were other successful co-operative ventures sponsored by the Jews, an Association of Wood and Iron Manufacturers; an Association of Knitgoods Manufacturers; the Jewish Chamber of Commerce. There were also landsmanschaften, party groups, and loan funds whose creation helped many a Jewish merchant start, or remain, in business.

One of the organizations that the Jews from Eastern Europe lost little time in establishing was the burial society, Chevra Kadisha. Founded in Buenos Aires in 1894, the Chevra Kadisha has developed into the community's central institution, the Kehilla, whose membership in the capital is about 46,000 families, or about 50 per cent of the total community. Due to its mass membership, the Kehilla elections have the character of a popular vote, 18,000 persons participating in 1957.

The Kehilla has used its authority and means mainly for cultural work, especially education, and the greater part of its budget supports Yiddish-Hebrew schools. It also maintains a teachers' seminary, contributes to teachers' salaries, and subsidizes school building programs. Outside Buenos Aires, other communities have developed the local Chevra Kadisha as central communal bodies.

Apart from the emphasis on Jewish education in Argentina, it is reliably estimated that 25 per cent of Jewish children of school age attend Jewish schools, there is considerable activity in Yiddish publishing. In addition to two Yiddish dailies, there are Yiddish periodicals and a number of publishing houses specializing in books, including the works of Yiddish authors all over the world. At the same time, as the younger generation assumes Spanish as its first language, publishers have found it necessary to provide Spanish-language books on Jewish topics for the Spanish speaking generation. Many of these books are translations from Yiddish, Hebrew, and English works.

With its schools, cultural institutions, societies, institutions, Zionist parties and landmanschaften, Argentinian Jewry has something else that is exemplary; a centrally organized representative body that, in matters of broad Jewish concern, is authorized to speak in the name of the community. That organization is the DAIA, or Delegacion de Asociaciones Israelitas Argentinas. Representative of all community groups and trends, the DAIA guards the rights of Jews, counters discrimination in all its forms and, as the spokesman of the community, has received full recognition by the Argentinian authorities.

Today through its affiliation with the World Jewish Congress, the DAIA, and that means Argentinian Jewry, is playing an ever-increasing part in international gatherings and in global discussions of matters of common interest to Jews everywhere. Though it may still be youthful, Argentinian Jewry, as its vast album of centenary greetings testifies, is recognized as a full and active partner in the world of Jewry.

These thirteen promising young Quebec students are among the 50 from all parts of Canada who will shortly begin their college careers in the Arts or Sciences at the Universities of their choice under the Bank of Montreal Canada Centennial Scholarship Plan. Each of these students will receive a scholarship of $750, in this, the first year of the Bank's seven-year Plan.

We, at the Bank of Montreal, congratulate these exceptional young people. We are happy to assist them in their pursuit of a higher education in fields where they will have the opportunity — through scientific research and pursuits in the public service — to contribute in some notable way to the common good of the nation in the years ahead.

To all of these students we extend warmest wishes in their endeavours to qualify for the additional valuable scholarships to be awarded each year until 1967, when the Plan culminates in Canada's Centennial Year.

HERE ARE THE ADDITIONAL AWARDS FOR WHICH THESE STUDENTS MAY QUALIFY:

48 SCHOLARSHIPS OF $1,500...

In the Spring of 1961, the top 16 of these 50 students will each be awarded a B of M Scholarship of $1,500 for second-year university training.

In 1962 and 1963, provided at least good second-class grades have been maintained, these same students will each be awarded a B of M Scholarship of $1,500 per annum . . . leading to graduation in 1964.

24 FELLOWSHIPS OF $3,000...

In the Spring of 1964, the top eight of these 16 students will each be awarded a B of M Scholarship of $3,000 for one year's study anywhere in Canada or abroad.

In 1965 and 1966, provided a satisfactory standard of work has been maintained, these same students will each be awarded a B of M Scholarship of $3,000 per annum for further study leading to their Doctorate.

2 BANK OF MONTREAL CANADA CENTENNIAL AWARDS OF $5,000

In 1967, to culminate this seven-year plan, the two top students—one in Arts and one in Science—will be chosen, from all 50 original participants in the plan, to receive the Bank of Montreal Canada Centennial Awards of $5,000 each for a further year of study anywhere in Canada or abroad.

Thus, to each of these two winners — if they have been participants throughout the plan — the Bank will have provided financial assistance amounting to $19,250.

Scholarship Students are chosen on merit alone — academic standing and character — by independent selection committees of faculty members of Canadian Universities. THE B of M HAS NO PART WHATEVER IN THE DECISIONS OF THE COMMITTEES.
